

Looking squarely down on the roof in the bird's eye view on the opposite page and then at the detailed floor plan here, you get a clear idea of just what an extensive undertaking this was. The shadowed section represents the area of the original farmhouse structure and its re-zoning by architect Coston to fit contemporary needs. Typical example of his originality in design is the positioning of living room and carport at an angle.